

Program: Certificate in E-Learning Dept: Adult Education and Safety Sciences
College: Education and Professional Studies
Code: 3790

As more learning is conducted in the online environment, from K-12 and online universities to large corporate training programs, the rationale continues to be the same, user demand. Thus, industry and communities are using technology more to meet learning needs. The need for adult education practitioners competent in the design, development, and facilitation of adult learning in an online environment is supported within the field from conferences with themes revolving around the use of technology in the learning environment to new Masters and Doctoral Degree programs in Adult and Higher Education focusing on technology.
